

• THE NEW PLAYS •

"The Angel in the House"
Means Only Arnold Daly.

BY CHARLES DARNTON

YOU KNOW a monologue when you hear it, don't you? And you don't throw it into confusion with your idea of a play, do you? I have it to you, then, to find the good part of "The Angel in the House," produced last night at the Fulton Theatre.

By way of starting an argument, Mr. Daly doesn't mind saying that Arnold Daly is the most talented and intelligent actor on the American stage. The one trouble is that his intelligence sometimes runs away with him and leads him into a play that will not bear the test of American audiences. As an artist he stands quite alone—but he must have a play behind him. The play written by Eden Phillips and Hull MacDonald Hastings is witty enough to fetch a laugh out of the most hardened theatregoer, but otherwise it remains the machine-made thing of the theatre. There was good acting on the part of Mr. Daly, who made his only mistake in a certain speech that was too long and too many let it go at that.

"GOOD AND CLEAN"
IS THE VAUDEVILLE
OF THE COLONIAL.

An unusually strong bill marked the Colonial Theatre debut as the official head of the Keith Vaudeville Circuit. The programme was well-balanced throughout, and so set appearing but what served to give each night's capacity audience good, clean entertainment. Frank McIntyre, who excels fun, presented a farce, "The Hat Salesman." The clever lines of the piece were written by George V. Hobart and McIntyre made every one personal for inspired utterance.

Bernard Gruenwald rendered some catchy songs and showed new dances, and Julian Kingsbury was the star in a thrilling one-act tragedy, "The Coward." Other entertainers were Jack Donahue and Marion Stewart in "Him and Her," a sketch; Olga Gray, a Spanish violinist, and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wiles in a good shadowgraph act.

PROCTOR'S 5TH AVENUE
OFFERS AN INTERPRETER
OF CLASSICAL DANCES.

A good variety bill of eight acts is offered at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre for the first half of this week. Miss Mary Vadie, a skilled interpreter of lyrics and classic dances, under the direction of Hans R. Lanne, presented a series of new dances, which were approved by an enthusiastic audience last night. The stage settings and fine costumes helped to make this act a big point winner on the bill.

"Don't Walk in Your Sleep," a one act comedy presented by Milton and Company, was another feature on the programme.

Mr. Daly made a brave speech in defense of his loyal company and we may let it go at that.

LONDON MUSIC HALL
SONGS MAKE BIG HIT
AT THE COLUMBIA.

The London Belles, this week at the Columbia, is really a good show. Little Johnnie Weber is in perfect form, and put many hits across. Miss Lucy Harcourt, in a manner not common to English houses, gave two songs in the style unique in the London music halls—songs that only a person with her talent can put across with success.

Miss Rose Sydell, who is credited with the ownership of the Belles, was so good the audience couldn't see enough of her.

J. H. Wilson was clever, but without Gertrude and Harry Duddy, Chauncey Johnson and Kathleen Johnson the show would not have reached its high mark.
